ART IN PUBLIC SUMMER SCHOOL

Communication and Interaction through Art in Public Spaces Interface Summer School in Belfast in association with Catalyst Arts

The Communication and Interaction through Art in Public Spaces Summer School will take place from 14 - 17 September 2007. It offers a three-day programme and two evening lectures facilitated by four experienced international artists:

Francis Zeischegg, Berlin, lead facilitator
Ele Carpenter, Newcastle
Ailbhe Murphy, Dublin
Susanne Bosch, Belfast | Berlin

In workshops and through discussions, participants will explore and discover their own approaches to connect and exchange as artists with a range of communities in different social settings. They will encounter other models of participatory art practice through visits to artists in Belfast and Northern Ireland, and insights into the work of the four facilitating artists.

The workshop is based on a catalogue of questions developed by Francis Zeischegg.

The Summer School enables emerging artists to:

- * engage in a dialogue on art as communication
- * identify different strategies of participatory art practice in the public space
- * enhance their ability to speak and write about their own experience as emerging artists
- * identify needs for further skills and knowledge development in specific communication situations

The Summer School will produce a publication that will make the information and knowledge gained during the event accessible to the wider public.

The event will take place in Catalyst Arts, Belfast, the city and the region. It coincides with Catalyst Arts' public art project "Rag and bone" by Martin Carter.
